

During the infrastructure review conducted this quarter, Michael Grant from Summit Analytics presented an overview of network monitoring strategies.

Grant demonstrated how anomaly detection tools can identify unusual traffic patterns, such as unexpected access from addresses like 203.0.113.77.

He emphasized that the purpose of these examples was purely educational and part of simulated security exercises used in training.

The complete report will be published later this month on the company's resource portal.